Site was an old dump; is now a park. The change occurred sometime in the 1960's. During its dumping years, there was unrestricted access to the site. Bendix Oil Company notified on the site for all their wastestreams so the potential for burial of drums in LaSalle Park is possible. Liquids may have also gone to the lake itself. Very limited information available on this site due to the time period the site operated. It was apparently used in the 1950's but when it began is vague. Since the site is a public park, lake sediment sampling and a magnetometer survey is indicated to characterize the site.
